FORMER LOBBYIST . . .

Hickel 'Aide' Under Attack

Washington (P) — A former lobbyist who opposed stricter federal conservation measures in two key areas last year has been quietly named a high-level advisor to Secretary of the Interior Walter J. Hickel.

There is some mystery about the title and duties held by the appointee, James G. Watt, who registered Oct. 23, 1967, as a lobbyist for the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, and worked for the chamber in the areas of mining, public lands, water and environmental pollution.

One Interior Department source said Watt is "some sort of consultant." Watt's own office at Interior described him as a special assistant. A spokesman for the Chamber of Commerce said Watt could be deputy undersecretary.

Oil Specialist?
The Oil and Gas Journal has described Watt as Hickel's "eyes and ears on oil." Oil Daily called him Hickel's "oil specialist."

But repeated attempts to reach Watt himself were unsuccessful, and his job, officially, remains undefined.

As lobbyist for business and industry interests last year, Watt opposed legislation which would have tightened federal control over industrial water pollution and permitted federal intervention in the reclamation of lands devastated by strip mining.

Both pieces of legislation, which had the Interior Department's support under the Democratic administration, still are pending in Congress.

Protests
Watt's appointment brought protests from two senators who were among leaders of the unsuccessful fight to deny Senate confirmation to Secretary Hickel on the ground that he was not sufficiently committed to strict conservation policies.

As a consultant or special assistant, Watt would not be subject to Senate confirmation.

Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., sent a private letter to Secretary Hickel, saying:

"Although I realize that those whom you wish to work on your staff, I think the appointment of a man who is so identified with the private interests can only create a credibility gap between your statements of concern for the public interest . . . and your actions as secretary of the interior . . ."

The possibility of Watt's influence in the Interior Department also upset Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, who charged that the U.S. Chamber of Commerce "has been in the forefront of those who have undertaken to challenge the authority of the secretary of interior."

Noting that Watt was secretary of the Chamber's natural resources committee, Muskie said:

"If the point of view of the Chamber of Commerce of the U.S. were to be adopted, in my judgment it would destroy the water quality standards program as it is now established."

Water Bill Foe

One of Watt's battles last year with the Interior Department erupted in the House Public Works Committee which was considering new water pollution control standards written by then Secretary of the Interior Stewart L. Udall. The standards would have required a minimum of two stages of treatment for municipal wastes and a comparable degree of treatment for industrial wastes.

One Interior Department source said Watt is "some sort of consultant." Watt's own office at Interior described him as a special assistant. A spokesman for the Chamber of Commerce said Watt could be deputy undersecretary.

Bills Threaten Lancaster County's Revenue

By GERRY SWITZER
Star Staff Writer

If numerous bills introduced in the 1969 Legislature pass, taxing authorities fear that Lancaster County's main source of revenue — the ad valorem tax — will be destroyed and the local mill levies will be forced to skyrocket to make up the deficit.

Several of these bills provide for central assessment of property such as motor vehicles, truck fleets and railroad property such as the Burlington Shops in Lincoln and then funding back a percentage of the revenue to the counties.

Lancaster County officials point to the county's loss of nearly $500,000 in revenue last year as an example of how the larger counties lose revenue under such a funding-back system.

Taxes Eliminated
This loss resulted when much of the personal property tax, the head, poll and Kerr-Mills taxes were eliminated and the counties received a so-called revenue replacement when a percentage of sales and income taxes collected throughout the state was funded back to counties.

Get About One-Third

At the present time there are three sets of statutes calling for central assessment of property by the state, application of an "average" state levy, collection by the state and distribution of tax revenue to the counties based on relative real estate values.

Under this method, Lancaster County realizes approximately 10% of the total revenue collected, while the county would receive approximately one-third if the property were valued locally or "at situs."

For example, $885,000 was collected in the state last year under current statutes regarding proration of interstate truck fleets.

Under present law,

Under present law, these trucks are valued by the state but the taxes are collected locally, with Lancaster County realizing approximately one-third or $295,000, but under proposed legislation they would receive only 10% of the total or about $88,500 with a loss of more than $200,000 in revenue.

LB418, introduced by Sen. Terry Carpenter, provides for central assessment of any manufacturing plant necessary in the operation of a railroad and any property contiguous to the manufacturing plant in addition to other railroad property already centrally assessed.

The passage of this bill would result in a minimum loss of $150,000 in revenue to Lancaster County because of the Burlington Shop property.

Other Losses

Other bills, the passage of which will result in loss of revenue to Lancaster County, are the numerous ones providing for various exemptions.

The six bills, already introduced in connection with the homestead exemption provision approved by voters in November, could have varying effects on the county, but most would result in substantial losses to a county the size of Lancaster.

It has been estimated that approximately $2.2 million in revenue would be lost in Lincoln and Lancaster County if an exemption of 20% up to a maximum of $2,000 per home were allowed.

Added Cuts

Two of the bills introduced have added exemptions for veterans, with Sen. Jules Burchbach's bill allowing an additional 10% exemption for veterans.

Assuming that half of Lancaster County's homeowners are veterans, this exemption would result in an additional half million dollar loss in revenue, with the result being a $2.75 million total revenue loss for homestead exemptions.

LB386, introduced by Sen. Carpenter, provides for repealing the provision of law for taxing the values of leases on public lands, and would result in a loss of at least several hundreds of thousands of dollars to a county the size of Lancaster.

This section presently allows for full valuation of privately-owned improvements on leased public lands but does not explicitly provide for taxing any lease value of publicly owned improvements on leased public lands.

Favored Position

According to Lancaster County Deputy Assessor E. B. Schrepf, who appeared against this bill at a committee hearing last week, the contemplated legislation under Carpenter's bill, "creates a favored tax position to lessees, unwarranted by constitution."

He said there seems to be a misconception that the present section of the law pertains only to rural school lands leased for agricultural purposes and that these lessees are entitled to the 'favoritism' of exemption.

"These leased school lands are only a segment of a much greater problem; for there are, in fact, countless other public lands and public improvements in the more metropolitan areas where the annual lease rentals are counted in the millions and the values of such properties run into the multi-millions," Schrepf said.

Discriminatory

He said that there being no supporting tax revenue obtained from these properties constitutes a "favored tax position" which is "discriminatory" against the valid taxpayer in competitive business and ownership who is paying taxes on like property, similarly used.

Several other exemption provisions are present in other bills before the legislature which have elements of eliminating the ad valorem tax.

The counties may also lose commissions for collection of taxes for other governmental subdivisions under anticipated legislation, and a bill to eliminate the provision that the county treasurer collect the sales tax on motor vehicles has already been introduced.

During 1968, Lancaster County collected $23,000 in fees for collection of the motor vehicle sales tax, and during the 1967-68 fiscal year, the county received $224,861 in commission for collection of taxes for school districts, watershed districts, fire districts, etc.

East Germans Bar Delegates

... TO W. GERMAN ELECTIONS

Berlin (P) — Communist East Germany announced Sunday it would bar West German state and federal delegates from traveling to Communist-ringed West Berlin where they are scheduled to elect a new federal president March 5.

The official news agency ADN said the restrictions would be effective Feb. 15. It made no mention of air links between the West and Berlin, and most Federal Assembly delegates were expected to fly across the 110 miles that separate the city from the West.

Nixon Visit

President Nixon, scheduled to visit West Berlin Feb. 27 on his European tour, could find himself in the middle of a bitter confrontation.

The West German government denounced the East German move as "aggressive and peace-disrupting." A spokesman in Bonn declared:

"The federal government is determined, together with its allies, to take all necessary measures to strengthen the viability of Berlin."

Representatives of the United States, Britain and France — which have responsibilities in West Berlin under post-World War II agreements — conferred in Bonn to draft a statement described as firm but "low-key." It was not expected to be published before Monday.

No Comment

In Washington, neither the State Department nor the White House had any comment on the Communist restrictions, but Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird said: "It is not a matter directly concerning us."

The East German travel ban is founded on the Communists' claim that by holding the election in Berlin — which it has done every five years since 1954 — West Germany is asserting an illegal claim to the divided city's Western zone, which fell under U.S.-British-French jurisdiction after the war.

The Bonn government contends with the Western allies' approval, that West Berlin is a West German state, unincorporated as yet but entitled

Israel Moves Back Business Law Date

Jerusalem (P) — Israel announced Sunday it would wait three months before putting into effect a law which led Jordan to demand a meeting of the U.N. Security Council. It would bring Arab merchants in the Old City under Israeli control.

Diplomatic observers at the United Nations said they expected Jordan would press ahead with its demand for the emergency meeting, despite the new date when Arab companies must join the Israeli business register.

They said the meeting would probably be held Tuesday.

IN PERSPECTIVE

By WILLIAM O. DOBLER

Sen. George Syas thinks there are a lot of foolish bills in the Legislature this year. To prove it, he introduced a bill making the grasshopper the official state bug, sort of like the state rock, state song, state tree, etc.

The idea was to dramatize the ridiculous extent to which senators can go in filling the legislative hopper with nonsense. The senator has our sympathy, since the number of bills this session has exceeded the 1,000-mark. There just couldn't be that many things wrong with Nebraska as it now stands.

And justice could not possibly be done to all the measures. We are really fantastically lucky when it comes to legislation. Out of more than 1,000 bills, there could be any number of sleepers — measures that would adversely affect our interests if we knew about them.

Still, we may not be as bad off as some states. In Indiana, a resolution has been introduced in the House to establish the mushroom as the official state fungus, and not as a joke.

It's a little hard to see why a state would want an official fungus. There are all kinds of fungi but the average person doesn't think much of the whole group. Fungi, if you get right down to it, are desperately in need of a public relations job.

While there are good fungi, most people think of fungi as something unwanted. More often than not, they would associate fungus with a disease or an infection, which it can be. In nature, they associate fungus with all sorts of undesirable growth. If we were Indiana, we are not so sure we would have an official fungus.

And if you want to get down to facts, the mushroom probably is no more prominent in Indiana than it is in Nebraska, Missouri, Iowa or some other states. One thing we know for sure — whatever member of the Union comes up with an official state rodent can have the honor all to itself.

Other equally important topics are finding their way into the legislative halls across the land. Two Maryland senators introduced a bill changing several holidays from their existing dates to Monday, thus providing four long weekends.

The federal government has done this, you know, with a number of national holidays that will be coming in the future on Monday. Always on Monday, that is, and never on Sunday (or Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday or Saturday, for that matter).

But the senators' constituents didn't take too kindly to such a change. Opponents to the bill introduced a proposal that would designate celebration of the two senators' birthdays on the first Monday of the month in which they were born.

It seems that this deal has all sorts of possibilities. Why wouldn't it be a good idea to make Monday the day for celebrating any and all observances? Just use the Monday closest to the original date or a set Monday in the month.

Obviously, this would save a lot of people embarrassment. How many family conflicts have developed over the fact that somebody forgot somebody else's birthday or anniversary?

How simple it would be if all you had to remember was the month. Then, you would have only the 12 months of the year to contend with, rather than 365 days.

It would do a lot, too, for the stature of Monday, and Monday needs a little help. As things now stand, Monday is just the first work day of the week and no day could have a worse spot than that. Tuesday is sort of a nothing day but at least it has nothing against it.

By Wednesday you are halfway through the week and can start looking forward to Friday. Monday clearly needs something to improve its image and what more could it than everybody's birthday and anniversary?

Several Ways To Deal With Campus Rioters

NEW YORK — There's one group of individuals in connection with the current craze for campus riots who are beginning to show signs of unrest. And they may be — indeed, they ought to be — the most influential group of all: the parents.

It takes money to go to college . . . maybe around $3,000 . . . maybe as much as $10,000. That's for one year. Most families consider this a fairly substantial investment.

So what kind of investment is that tuition and room-and-board money, if Sonny is cutting class to toss bricks through the president's window? Or eating jailhouse rations after smashing a policeman's head? Or locked out of class by the riots?

A few parents are beginning to suspect that maybe they're wasting their money.

Then there's another set of disturbed mommies and pops. Those whose darlings couldn't get into one of top schools like Columbia or the University of California at Berkeley, in spite of superior grades and leadership.

These students had to settle for something less because there was no room at the top.

Who can blame a parent who, under all this pressure, grumbles at what he considers weak-kneed, gutless administrators who buckle before the wild ones?

What would make room at the top? Well, how's this for starters — let Columbia, California, Brandeis, and all the rest kick the hellraisers out, be they "A" students or not, and make room for kids willing to go to class and learn a little something before they start remaking the world.

Does this sound too revolutionary? Too undemocratic? It isn't, really, because, as in all revolts, the minority is dictating.

Yet these people have

Moving Game Commission

The Grand Island Independent reasons that a proposal by State Senator Rudolf Kokes to move the State Game Commission to Ord is not a facetious matter. We doubt that it is, either, and we imagine that Senator Kokes is quite serious in the action.

The argument is that land is so much cheaper in that part of the state that a move would be profitable to the taxpayers since the commission is looking for a new office building. That argument, too, is not without merit.

It is further stated that Lincoln would oppose the move because it wants the government operation here. Quite right again. By the same token, Ord might want the operation for the same economic reasons Lincoln would like to keep it, thus evening the count in the area of selfish interests.

But beyond the matter of land are other considerations. For instance, there is a bill in the Legislature making the commission a code department under the governor. If this transpired, it would make it cumbersome to have the commission in Ord.

Further, the general decentralization of government that takes place in the natural course of events has some shortcomings. The more dispersed government is, the more independent it is and the more removed from the legislature and taxpayers it becomes. The physical independence of an agency encourages operational independence.

It is argued that decentralization of education is meritorious and, therefore, other decentralizations have merit. But in education we are also seeking administrative consolidation.

And any decentralization of government would want to consider the matter of public convenience. Is it better served from one or many points? The suggestion for a move to Ord is not facetious but neither is it an automatic good deal for the taxpayers.

Interest In Council Low?

Maybe it's just our imagination, but it seems there is less interest in the spring City Council contests than in previous city election years.

Granted, there are a little over five weeks remaining until the March 19 filing deadline. No filings at the election commissioner's office, however; only a few petitions taken out and the rumor mill has been strangely inactive.

The terms of John Comstock, Lloyd Hinkley and Carroll Thompson have come to an end and it has been public knowledge for some time that Hinkley and Thompson have decided to bring their council careers to a halt. Comstock, playing it cool as usual, has not yet announced his intentions.

In 1965, Thompson led the pack of candidates twice. He was first to announce he would seek a term — early in January — and then filed January 20th. Starting early, running well, Thompson finished

New Nixon TV Image Is Carefully Restored; First Debate With Kennedy Proved Disastrous

WASHINGTON — Those gently cautious smiles on the men around President Nixon reflect the belief that, in public opinion at least, everything is coming up roses for the new administration. They ascribe a lot of the successful look to television and the mastery of the medium their man has achieved.

The transformation worked via the tube in eight years is one of the prime reasons, as the Nixon managers see it, that he where he is today. The formula is not so much Marshall McLuhan's "the medium is the message" as it is the setting is the message.

While the sophisticates scoffed at the Nixon TV spectacular last December when in Ed Sullivan style he presented the members of his cabinet, Herb Klein and the other communicators cite this as a triumph that set the tone for the presidency. With an audience estimated at 65,000,000, possibly only once before did a president or a president-elect command so many viewers.

The transformation began during the campaign when Candidate Nixon devoted most of his huge television budget to regional panel programs. In a relaxed and easy manner he answered questions put to him by members of carefully hand-picked panels. Over a hook-up of a half-dozen stations, the questions tended to stress regional and local problems of immediate concern to voters in the area.

The administration is planning to make extensive use of television. Current planning calls for sending cabinet members around the country to talk on regional hookups similar to those put together in the campaign.

By DON WALTON
Rumors about state senators, their business interests, their honesty and integrity, their motives, even their after-hours activities sell for about a dime a dozen.

And they apparently have become a serious concern to some senators. Terry Carpenter raised the subject at a public hearing on the conflict-of-interest bill.

Rick Budd said he believes the bill will head off some of the loose talk. And if anyone has a legitimate case to make against a senator, he can take it in confidence to a conflicts of interest committee.

"We've got to stop the rumors," Carpenter said. They have damaged the effectiveness of a number of lawmakers, he noted.

Attorney General Clarence Meyer told the committee that the U.S. Supreme Court, in recent decisions, has all but declared every public official to be "fair game."

That Carpenter suggested, may not remain true after President Nixon has had the opportunity to change the complexion of the court.

In any event, the complaint rings true.

Every person in public life, including the governor, past governors and would-be governors, suffers the same fate. And so do congressmen and U.S. senators.

If that conflict-of-interest bill will help reduce the rumor flow, by inviting citizens to put up or shut up, it will have rendered the public and its elected representatives a service.

Finishing up:

— One poor fellow, obviously a alarmed and outraged over a bill being heard in the legislative committee last week became so agitated in testifying against the proposal that his teeth fell out. The upper plate dropped briefly into repose on his lower lip, but undismayed, he shoved it back up and ground to a halt.

"Meanwhile, City Police Chief Glenn Means said: 'The mayor and I see this the same way. In any big community, it's a necessary evil.'

"He reported that there was not a single case of rape in Terre Haute last year. 'Oh yeah, a few college girls hollered rape,' he continued, but it really wasn't.'

"He then added: 'There is more prostitution at that college than there is anywhere else in this town.'

"Larrison concluded that the city's reputation is still one of its major problems.

'We've got a bad reputation,' he said, 'and it wouldn't make any difference if Jesus Christ was mayor, we'd still have a bad reputation.'

As a resident of Lincoln and a taxpayer, I was happy to see that the Lincoln Education Association is requesting a salary increase for teachers so that the minimum starting salary is no less than $7,000. This is a good step in the right direction but I personally believe that a $10,000 starting salary would be more appropriate.

Has anyone ever done a survey to find out the number of hours a teacher actually puts in every week? I am sure it must be many, considering the time necessary for preparing the next day's lesson, the time to correct and grade papers, the time to attend education meetings, and the time to read journals and attend seminars. A teacher's school day does not really begin at 9:00 and end at 3:00 o'clock.

Another reason to pay better salaries is to attract the best teachers. When we have topnotch teachers, we are going to have topnotch students — students who are better prepared to help solve the problems of today and of the future.

I was also happy to see the LEA request that those staff members who are not Christians have time off to celebrate the holidays of their particular religious beliefs without loss of pay. This is only right, since we pay the Christian teachers for the time off at Christmas and Easter.

P.S. I am not a school teacher.

As a loyal Nebraskan and student at the University of Nebraska, I must express admiration for the political courage of State Senator Carpenter and the senators who joined him in support of LB8. This bill, which provides for mandatory suspension of students in state schools upon conviction for possession of marijuana, certainly is a strong challenge to the permissiveness that is sweeping this country," to quote Senator Batchelder.

Although I do not know personally of any students who would knowingly use drugs, it's about time we students realized that this education certainly is a privilege, and not a "right." The senators' recognition that such students have no place in higher education affirms a feeling I've had for some time that our "modern" universities have little success in improving people morally.

Let's take for example the days of Noah. People had lost their sense of balance and were living it up. No doubt they got a big kick out of old Noah who went so far as to build a ship on the side of a mountain in the desert where it never rained, instead of down where the water was. But Noah informed them that he intended to let the water come up to the boat. And Noah laughed last.

Yes, some of the elections are not won by the majority vote. Perhaps if we would learn from the past, we wouldn't follow the crowd.

Illegally Abroad

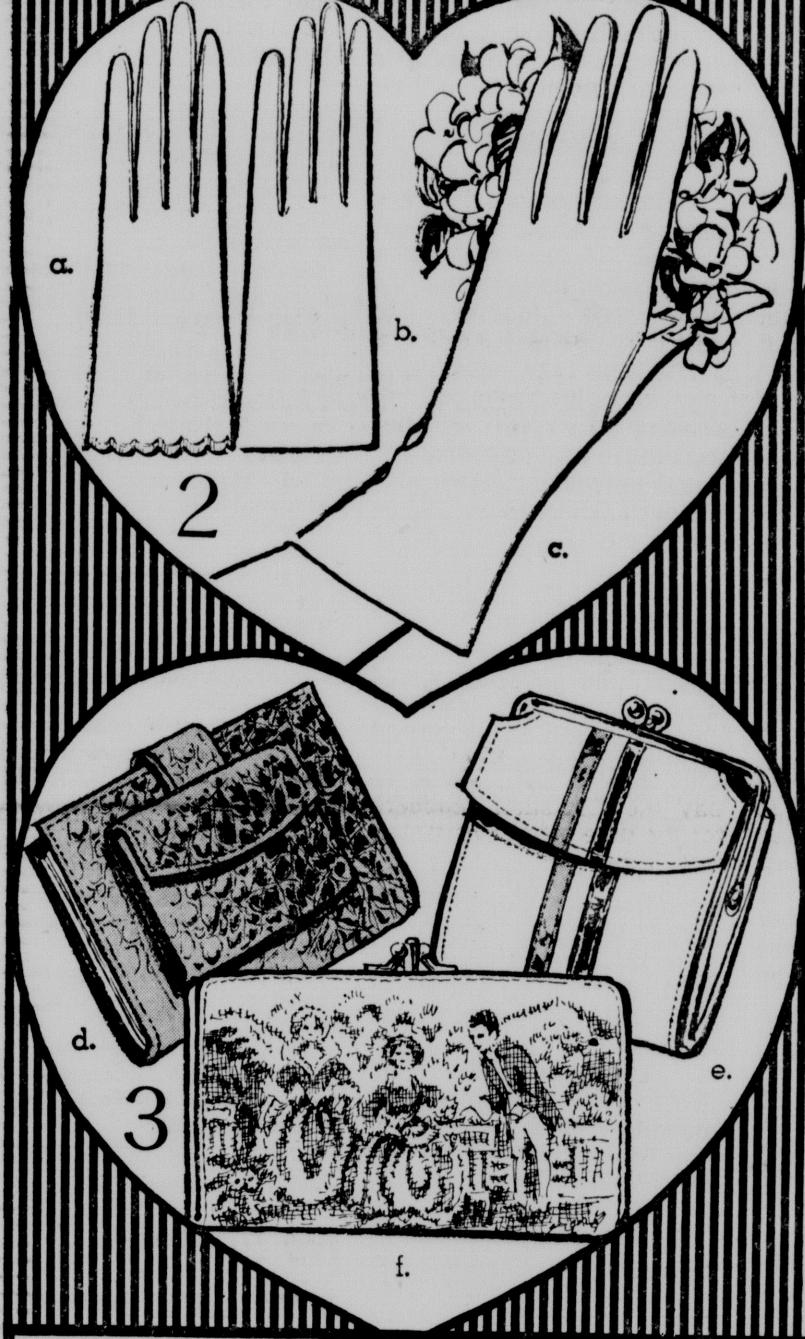

Vienna, Austria (AP) — Radio Prague said 25,000 Czechoslovaks are living abroad illegally.

A broadcast said 35,000 citizens left their homeland since the Soviet-led invasion in August and that only 10,000 of them have permission from the government to remain outside the country.

Work May Resume On Sentinel System

Washington (UPI) — Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird hinted Sunday that work may be resumed on the controversial "thin" antiballistic missile system. It was suspended recently for further study.

Laird said the Soviet Union "is escalating the arms race" and "has been for the past 24 months."

He added that there has been no decision to abandon the Sentinel anti-missile system on which work has been halted pending a re-study of the whole question.

Laird declared that if he was going to err in the area of defense spending it would be on the side of "sufficient and adequate military power to ensure peace," including in Southeast Asia.

Laird was interviewed on the CBS television-radio program "Face the Nation."

Outspending U.S. The defense secretary said the Soviets are outspending the United States in a ratio of about seven to one in defensive nuclear weaponry, based on ratio of Gross National Products of the two nations.

He said they are outspending the United States four dollars to one on defensive missile systems and three dollars to two on offensive nuclear weapons. But he said that since their Gross National Product is only about half that of America he figures the ratio can be considered to be about seven to one as far as defensive missiles are concerned.

And Laird predicted that Red China would either fire or have the capability of firing an intercontinental ballistic missile by early 1970. The Soviets, Laird said, already have established a defensive missile system around Moscow and "they are continuing their missile defense efforts." But in response to a question he conceded that Soviet progress has not been as great as had been estimated earlier by U.S. experts.

He said he sees no "great change or shift of opinion in Congress" on the thin defense system that has been suspended for review. "Most of those that are against it in the last Congress" are against it in the 91st.

He said "we are reviewing this matter along with other items in the budget."

Public Position

"We will have a position stated publicly early in March." It is important, Laird said, "for us to be in a strong position" whenever U.S.-Soviet arms-reduction talks are held.

Laird said he thinks former President Lyndon B. Johnson's estimate of vast defense cost reductions contingent on end of the Vietnam war is far too optimistic. He said the Johnson estimate of slashing possibly $21 billion a year from defense after the Vietnam war is about three times too high.

The secretary noted that such expensive items as the U.S. Sixth and Seventh Fleets would have to be maintained and America would have to replace considerable equipment lost, damaged or destroyed in Vietnam. He said a reduction of about $7 billion dollars "for the first few years would be a more realistic figure."

Fleet Of 74 Soviet Trawlers Stays Outside U.S. Waters

Portsmouth, Va. (UPI) — A fleet of Soviet-bloc trawlers, warned to stay outside the U.S. 12-mile fishing limit or risk seizure, walloped 15 miles offshore Sunday under surveillance by two Coast Guard cutters.

No Incident The Coast Guard reported its air surveillance of the fishing fleet continued Sunday and an exact count of the vessels showed 74 trawlers, most with fish on their decks or in their nets, and four 600-foot Russian mother ships at anchor.

Twenty of the trawlers were reported to have intruded into the restricted zone Saturday — some within 10 miles of the Virginia coast.

The mother ships, all identified by markings as Russian, were spread out in a line 20 miles long northeast of the Chesapeake light tower. None were reported any closer to shore than 15 miles and the Coast Guard said no contact had been made with them since Saturday night.

By radio and by hand-delivered message from the cutter Point Arena, sent to the scene early Saturday night, the Coast Guard cautioned the fleet's mother ship, Pomorze, to keep the trawlers outside the boundary.

Overnight, the 82-foot Point Arena, with a crew of 11 and an 80mm mortar, was joined in the area off Virginia's Eastern Shore by the 205-foot cutter Cherokee, which has a crew of about 90 and a 3-inch gun.

Brain Signals Operate Artificial Arm

Philadelphia (UPI) — Amputees, some of the victims of the Vietnam war, are testing a revolutionary electronic arm that is operated by brain signals — just like the real limb it replaces.

Researchers said Sunday it is the first artificial arm to have four different and instantaneous movements. They work through battery-operated electrodes connected on the skin to muscles in the shoulder, chest and back.

The six-pound, metal-and-plastic arm was developed at Philadelphia's Moss Rehabilitation Hospital by a Temple University research team.

Not Perfected

Officials acknowledged it may be a year or longer — because of work in building a simple harness to hold the device firmly on the shoulder without disconnecting the circuits — before the arms are available for public distribution.

An amputee must be trained to use his muscles to operate the arm, just as he did when he had his own.

But Dr. F. Ray Finley, director of the Miss-Temple project, said, "We're well on our way. Navy and Marine amputees from the Philadelphia Naval Hospital are enthusiastic over the way it works."

The researchers estimate that every year about 1,500 Americans lose arms above the elbow.

Finley said the arm is unique because it allows an amputee to:

—Flex the arm at the elbow, the only arm movement now available with other prosthetic devices.

—Swing it from the shoulder inward and outward.

—Rotate the grasping device to turn the hook palm up and down.

—Grasp objects.

The arm uses 10 contact heads, attached by electrodes to different sets of muscles. These pick up signals transmitted from the brain, amplify them 100 times, and feed them into the electronic circuitry.

Voltage Multiplied

Donald Taylor, a Moss electronics engineer, said "voltage from a tiny cell is magnified 100,000 times to furnish the energy to turn the arm's parts."

"It permits the amputee to use muscles in his shoulder, back and chest to control the device exactly the way he would control his real arm."

"Once the amputee quickens his ability to transmit signals to the muscles there will be almost rhythmic smoothness in the arm's motion," said Roy Wirta, of Moss Hospital, the mechanical engineer on the team.

"It won't have the jerky, robot-type activity of the present conventional prosthetic arms. And the amputee won't have to physically shift his position to be able to pick up an object several feet away. This is the great advantage of the shoulder-rotating axis, allowing movement inward and outward, from left to right, as well as the flexing up and down at the elbow."

Work on the project began four years ago, financed by federal and private grants.

Finley said recent cuts in government funding for medical research may affect continued development, but said there is hope private sources can provide help.

Passenger Train Derailed In Illinois; At Least 17 Hurt

Chillicothe, Ill. (UPI) — A California bound Santa Fe Railroad passenger train with 89 persons aboard derailed six miles west of Chillicothe shortly before noon Sunday, tumbling some of the derailed coaches down a 40-foot embankment.

At least 17 persons were hurt and a score more were examined by physicians before being allowed to resume their journeys.

Six of the injured were hospitalized in Peoria, Ill., about 25 miles south of the accident scene. Another was released after treatment at a Peoria hospital.

Railroad employees said the two Diesel locomotives were still gaining speed after a stop at Chillicothe and were not going fast at the time of the accident.

Couplings of the coaches held, stringing them out like a giant link sausage along the roadbed but preventing them from stacking one atop another.

Two coaches toppled onto their sides and the other four tilted at angles along the embankment but remained upright.

Only one of the overturned coaches carried passengers.

The other was an empty car being dead headed westward.

Amendment Outpouring 'Shows Needed Change'

By ODELL HANSON
Associated Press Writer

Twenty-six constitutional amendment proposals are sprinkled among the some 1,000 bills introduced into the 1969 Legislature, and Sen. Elvin Adamson says the outpouring points up the need for his proposed "Nebraska Constitutional Revision Com mission."

The Valentine senator's LB244, product of an interim study, calls for creation of a commission of 18 to 30 members to study the constitution and bring suggested changes to the Legislature.

Such commissions have come to be used increasingly among the states in recent years, Adamson's Legislative Council Study Committee found.

Piecemeal Approach In Nebraska, which has spurned repeated proposals to call a constitutional convention for wholesale revision of the constitution, the proposed commission would offer an alternative to the present piecemeal approach by which the Legislature every two years considers dozens of individually-sponsored amendment proposals and decides which should earn a place on the next general election ballot.

The researchers estimate that every year about 1,500 Americans lose arms above the elbow.

Finley said the arm is unique because it allows an amputee to:

—Flex the arm at the elbow, the only arm movement now available with other prosthetic devices.

—Swing it from the shoulder inward and outward.

Opening lead — four of spades.

Here is a dramatic hand from the 1966 Trials. The deal was played at five tables.

At the first table, the bidding went as shown. North's four heart bid was rather unusual, since a jump raise to four is ordinarily reserved for a hand long in trumps but much weaker in high cards. However, South bid six anyhow and made seven for a score of 1,460 points.

At the second table, the bidding went:

South West North East
1 Pass 4 Pass
6 7 Dble

Four clubs was conventional; it showed excellent heart support and interest in a slam. East-West sacrificed and went down five — 900 points.

At the third table, the East-West pair also played seven diamonds doubled, down 900, after this sequence:

South West North East
1 Pass 3 4
5 5 6 Pass
Pass 7 Dble

At the fourth table, North-South bid seven hearts for 2,210 points on this sequence:

South West North East
1 Pass 2 3
4 6 6 7

Two clubs was a mark-time bid that served to stimulate South into undertaking the grand slam for a fine score.

At the fifth table, the bidding went somewhat more scientifically:

South West North East
1 Pass 4 Dble
4 NT 5 Pass
6 Pass 6 7
Pass 7

Four diamonds showed heart support and a singleton diamond; North's pass of five diamonds guaranteed one ace; six clubs was the grand slam force asking about trump support; six hearts showed the king; South's pass of seven diamonds, instead of a double, urged North to bid seven.

MISS CONNIE GLENNON

Announcement of the engagement and approaching marriage of Miss Connie Lee Glennon, formerly of Lincoln, to John S. McCune of Omaha, son of Mrs. Irvin McCune of Grand Island, and the late Mr. McCune, is made this morning by the bride-elect's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Glennon of Stillwater Okla.

The wedding is planned for Saturday, April 12.

Miss Glennon is a graduate of St. Elizabeth Hospital School of Nursing. She now is attending the University of Missouri and also is on the nursing staff of the University Medical at Columbia, Mo.

Mr. McCune was graduated last June from the University of Nebraska College of Business Administration and now is with the United States National Bank in Omaha.

The Busy People

If you have a February birthday, you are in good company, sharing the month with Mr. Lincoln, Mr. Washington, and quite a number of suburban residents. If you are planning to travel, have guests, or in general be busy in February, you are also in good company. We don't know what the two gentlemen we mentioned did in their various Februarys, aside from celebrating their birthdays, but we do know that suburban residents are on the move this month.

For example, there are Wedgewood Manor residents with everything from birthday celebrations to coffees to vacations on their minds. Mrs. Dean Tebo is thinking in terms of "coffee" — on Wednesday morning, she will be a hostess at her Englewood Dr. home when she entertains the members of the District 3 executive committee of the Campfire Girls, and the group's district director.

For members of the family at 611 Cot-tonwood Dr., early February means both birthday and vacation activity. On Saturday, Feb. 8, Miss Susan Beach celebrated her sixth birthday. Susan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Owen Beach, decided that a visit to the Zoo would be just the thing for a birthday party which had a Valentine's Day theme . . . if you have not had experience with little girls, you will not understand that logic. But don't let that worry you, it doesn't bother them.

Susan's party guests were Shari Yates, Jane Clifton, Genell Cascini, Debbie Watkins, Alison French, and Elaine Howe. Her birthday is actually not until Wednesday, Feb. 12, but there was a good reason for celebrating early. Tomorrow, you see, Mr. and Mrs. Beach will be departing for an eight-day stay in Scottsdale, Ariz. — and we detected a note of relief and happiness in Mrs. Beach's voice when, asked if the trip were for business or pleasure, she replied with a resounding — "Pleasure!!"

Today a wish of "Happy Birthday" is in order for Bobby Hansel, son of Mr. and Mrs. Glen Hansel, who is now eight years old. As did his Wedgewood Manor counterpart, however, Bobby celebrated a bit early, with a dinner party on Friday evening.

Helping the young Eastridge resident celebrate the event were his parents, sister Dianne, Mr. and Mrs. James Jenkins, and Mr. and Mrs. Marvin DeHaai and their children Muriel, Boyd, and Vivian.

The February birthday festivities are not confined to the younger set, however. Just ask Abe Lincoln, George Washington, or Kenneth Urquhart. Of the three, Mr. Urquhart will be the easiest to contact, being a present day Maple Village resident.

Celebrating his Feb. 7 birthday on Friday evening, Mr. and Mrs. Urquhart were joined for dinner by Mr. Urquhart's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Don Urquhart of Omaha, and Lincoln residents Mr. and Mrs. Don Mays, Mr. and Mrs. Bill Crist, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Shadley, and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bardsley.

"On again, off again" would be a fairly apt description of recent visitors to a Cotter Terrace home. Mr. and Mrs. Dwaine Karr had several visits during the week of Jan. 31 to Feb. 7 from Mr. Karr's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Mervin Karr of Dillon, Mont.

While in Nebraska, the Montana residents also were the guests of Mr. Karr's mother, Mrs. May Karr of Seward.

MISS JANE WESCOTT

Of particular interest to Lincoln and also to University of Nebraska campus circles this morning is the announcement made by Mr. and Mrs. Edgar S. Wescott of the engagement of their daughter, Jane, to Stephen Carlton Bailey, son of Mrs. Kenneth Bailey and the late Mr. Bailey.

Friday, June 6, has been chosen as the date of the wedding.

Miss Wescott is a senior at the University of Nebraska where she is a member of Pi Beta Phi sorority.

Mr. Bailey also is a senior at the University of Nebraska and his fraternity is Beta Theta Pi.

Shower

Honored at a surprise bridal courtesy on Saturday, Feb. 1, was Miss Judith Ann Krieger, whose marriage to Frederick C. McDaniel will be solemnized Saturday, Feb. 22.

The bride-to-be was presented a one-gift shower at the morning breakfast, for which Miss Barbara Schmidt was hostess at Scott's Pancake House. The guests included a group of co-employees of Miss Krieger.

ABBY

DEAR ABBY: When two young people wrote to say that they wanted to get a book on SEX IN MARRIAGE and study it together, you said, "Studying a subject is sure to stimulate one's curiosity and interest; furthermore there is no point in studying the violin if you have to wait two years to practice."

A humorous quip — but makes no sense.

I assume that you think studying about sex will lead to irresponsible experimentation. That is not necessarily so. It is CURIOSITY about sex, based on ignorance, which is more apt to cause youth to try it out, rather than genuine education about it. It is the darkly forbidden — that which has been kept hidden, which is stimulating, rather than enlightenment.

Parents can no longer keep their children ignorant about sex. Our real task is to see to it that it is presented in a mature, wholesome manner.

Sincerely,
R.S.H.: Dept. of Education
The American Institute
Of Family Relations
Los Angeles, Cal.

DEAR R. S. H.: I do not advocate "keeping children ignorant about sex." I think children (and adults, as well) should know all they NEED to know about sex. But I STILL say that a pair of high school sophomores who are "in love," going steady, and plan to be married "in a few years" do not need to sit down together and study a sex manual on marital relations.

DEAR ABBY: I am 21 and my husband is 22. We get along very well but here is the problem: He has very long hair, and I mean it is practically down to his shoulders.

During the daytime he keeps it nicely combed, but at night it is all over the place and it drives me crazy. When I mention a net he gets mad. What should I do?

RUNNING OUT OF PATIENCE

DEAR RUNNING: I agree, that man of yours needs a net — maybe both kinds. You'll probably run out of patience before he runs out of hair, so let him know he's no treat to sleep with, and let him make a choice.

Poll: Bucher's Actions Strongly Backed

By LOUIS HARRIS
American public opinion strongly supports the course of action followed by Commander Lloyd Bucher and the crew of the USS Pueblo in the capture of that ship by the North Koreans.

Fundamentally, the American people hold a consistent view that the most important consideration in the Pueblo case was to save the lives of the crew members in that situation rather than the ship, secret equipment, documents, or even the "honor and integrity" of the country. The public clearly is responding to values which are considerably at variance from the prevailing naval code.

The public agrees with Commander Bucher's claim that "the reason he confessed to spying in North Korean waters was that the crew was threatened with death," by 68% to 5%.

—Most Americans agree that "it was right for the United States to sign a false statement that the Pueblo violated North Korean waters, in order to get the crew back," by 58% to 22%.

—People grant that "in allowing the Pueblo to be captured, the captain of the Pueblo gave the Communists valuable secret equipment," by 36% to 20%, although an even higher 44% simply are not sure.

—The public rejects the proposition that "the honor and integrity of the U.S. are more important than the lives of any servicemen," by 65% to 13%.

When probed for their reasoning behind their support or opposition to the course of action taken by the United States in obtaining the release of the crew, four major reasons for backing the steps were volunteered by the people:

1. "It was important to do anything to get the men back."

2. "It was the only practical way to get them back."

3. "We have to stand behind

our men in uniform."

4. "It was better late than never."

Those in opposition to the action had three main reasons for disapproval:

1. "Some kind of steps should have been taken earlier."

2. "We should have been more forceful in our initial response."

3. "We should have immediately taken back the ship and men in the first place when it was captured."

Typical of the feeling of the public in support of the action of Commander Bucher and the crew was this skilled worker in San Diego, "Absolutely nothing should be put ahead of saving the lives of our own American fighting men."

A store clerk in Des Moines, Iowa, put it this way, "It certainly is not dishonoring the country by lying and admitting anything they want you to, if you are saving your life."

A businessman in Wenatchee, Washington, added, "It would have been wrong to start a war over it, and then once the Pueblo was captured, the important thing was to get the crew back alive."

A student in Boston said, "The captain and the crew were very brave and should be treated like heroes not traitors."

The dissenting and minority side took a more traditional view. A veteran of the Korean war said, "They should have fought to the end and gone down with their secrets and their ship."

A filling station operator in Rocky Mount, N.C., added, "When you are spying, you are at war. When you're at war, you fight to the death."

A member of the American Legion in Sarasota, Fla., put it this way, "Even though they were tortured, they had no right to dishonor the Navy and the country."

These results make it apparent that at least as far as the specific mission of the Pueblo was concerned, the capture of that vessel did not warrant the sacrifice of the lives of the captain and the crew in the minds of most Americans. Part of the people's reasoning is that the mission itself might have been questionable to some. More important, however, is the top priority the American people give to the lives of their men on active duty in uncertain circumstances.

CROSSING THE BAR

Bob Seagren of the University of Southern California, goes over the bar at 17-6, bettering his own world indoor pole vault standard by one-fourth of an inch in the Times Indoor Games Saturday night at the Forum in Los Angeles.

Casper Gets Hope Golf Meet Win

Palm Springs, Calif. (AP) — Breaking open a tight battle with an eagle 3 on the 14th hole, Billy Casper went on to shoot a six-under-par 66 Sunday and capture the 90-hole Bob Hope Golf Classic with a total score of 345.

The game's leading money winner with $205,000 last year, the 37-year-old Casper collected $20,000 of the $122,000 purse. It was his first victory of the year and he finished three shots over his nearest challenger.

Playing in 89-degree weather before packed galleries, including Vice President Spiro Agnew, Casper finished 15 strokes under par in tournament he first won in 1965.

The colorful setting of the nationally televised round was the 6,711-yard, par 36-36-72 Indian Wells Country Club for this 10th annual winter tournament.

Dave Hill, with a 66, was second at 348 and won $11,400, his largest single prize.

Jack Montgomery, 70, finished at 349, and the veteran Art Wall, one of the heroes of golf in the late 1950s and a former Masters champion, made a run for the top but fell back with a 71 for 350.

Frank Beard led the way into the final round with a two-stroke lead over Casper, Wall and Montgomery, but the man from Louisville, Ky., faltered with a 74 for 351. He was tied there with George Knudson who shot a 71.

It was Casper and Wall head and head and all even turning in the final nine holes of the marathon. The 45-year-old Wall began to fall back and Casper broke the thing open when he eagled the 478-yard 14th.

A drive and a terrific approach put him on the green in two and he holed out.

National Open champion Lee Trevino closed with a 71 for 353.

Defending champion Arnold Palmer, who had won the event three times but was never a real threat this time finished with a 70 for 356. Jack Nicklaus, who captured the Andy Williams-San Diego Open last Sunday, had a 68 for 354, which included an eagle on the 14th hole.

Dean Beman fractured par with 33-29-62 also for 351. The former amateur champion from Bethesda, Md., knocked in five birdies on the back nine, which he played first, and an eagle 3 on the 14th. The latter came on a 45-yard shot with a pitching wedge. It broke the course record of 63 held by Tommy Bolt.

For the first time in golf's history, which color television viewers probably appreciated, traps on the last nine holes were filled, not with sand, but with red, white and blue ceramic coated granules.

Rockets Retain Class A Lead

... WESTSIDE JUMPS TO NO. 2

By VRIGIL PARKER
Prep Sports Writer

The king continues to reign. Two-time defending state Class A high school basketball champion Lincoln Northeast nailed down the Trans-Nebraska Conference championship over the past weekend with wins over North Platte and Grand Island. At the same time, coach Ed Johnson's Rockets kept their unblemished record intact with their 11th and 12th straight wins.

Northeast continues as the No. 1 team in this week's ratings and also as the only unbeaten Class A club in the state.

A shakeup occurs elsewhere in the division, however, as a result of other weekend action. Omaha Westside, third the first three weeks and as low as seventh after a mid-season slump, jumps to a new high No. 2 after handily disposing of Omaha South, 77-60.

Omaha North, despite four losses, gains No. 3. Two of those defeats have been at the hands of Westside, but more important is the fact that the Vikings have won their last six in a row, and haven't lost since Jan. 11.

Creighton Prep, though the winner of two more over the weekend, fails to move up from its No. 4 spot. The Junior Jays had to come from behind before toppling winless Bellevue and Class B Lincoln Plus X.

Probably the weakest district in the state is still commanded by Hastings. Its 6-6 record is better than anything Grand Island, Kearney or McCook can muster.

Boys Town is the team to drop from sight to enable Scottsbluff to gain a spot. The Cowboys suffered their second loss of the year to Omaha Benson. Though the Bunnies are unranked, they are in a good position to gain a berth in the state tournament from one of two rather weak Metro-area districts. Boys Town still rates the call as the best of the rest.

South Vietnamese Find Arms Cache

... HUGE ROCKET WARHEADS

Saigon (UPI) — South Vietnamese marines turned up a giant enemy arms cache, including 240mm rocket warheads that can pack up to 100 pounds of explosives, in caves 60 miles north of Saigon Sunday.

The discovery, described by a government spokesman as the largest such stockpile ever found by South Vietnamese troops, came a week before the lunar new year Tet, which was marked last year by the Viet Cong's biggest offensive of the war.

Associated Press photographer Nick Ut, who was with the marines, said about 50 of the big warheads — about three feet long and 10 inches in diameter — were among more than 500 rockets seized in the caves, in War Zone C 18 miles from the Cambodian border.

'Improvised'

U.S. Command spokesmen, without seeing them, said the 240mm rockets probably had been improvised at Viet Cong arms shops in the jungled area. They expressed belief that, though rather crude launchers would limit their range, they could be shot a mile or more.

The smaller rockets were standard 107mm and 122mm models of Chinese and Russian make, which can be lobbed from three to seven miles.

The Marines also seized six launchers for the 240mm rockets; a 122mm rocket launcher; 15 antiaircraft machine guns mounted on wheels; 22 standard machine guns; 39 mortar tubes; 400 AK47 assault rifles; seven

Traffic Signals Are Installed On Priority Basis

... CITY USES POINT SYSTEM TO RATE INTERSECTIONS

By THOMAS EKVALL
Star Staff Writer

How does the city determine when and where traffic signals are installed at intersections?

That question was asked of Robert Holsinger, city traffic engineer, following last week's City Council meeting at which West Side residents asked for signalization at West O St. and Capital Beach Drive.

Ed Copple, a spokesman for the residents, said the traffic flow was so heavy that it was hazardous for motorists and pedestrians to cross West O St.

Copple said the city has not taken any action to ease the traffic situation despite numerous discussions he had with city officials during the last several years.

Copple spoke to the council prior to its approval of a signal system at the 27th and P Sts. intersection.

Priority List

Holsinger explained that a priority list is used to rank intersections needing signalization.

He said the list is based upon an evaluation system which measures six factors — called warrants — indicating a need for a signal system.

Points granted in each warrant category are totaled to determine the ranking.

"We had to use a system which would impartially rate the need for a traffic signal because of the number of requests our department gets for such signals, the number of locations with known problems and the limited amount of funds available to install signal systems," Holsinger said.

Yearly Check

Each year the intersections are re-evaluated to check on new situations which might influence the traffic flow.

He cited the 27th and P Sts. intersection as an example of a street needing signalization due to new situations even though it had not been rated on the priority list.

Ranked 39th

"The West O St. intersection received only 14 points out of a possible 60, ranking it 39th on our priority list," the traffic engineer said.

He said the number one priority presently is the 48th and Holdrege Sts. intersection with 41 points.

The warrant system evaluates the following factors:

Total vehicular volume: Points are determined by the major and minor street volumes entering the intersection. A maximum of 15 points is possible with the volumes based on a four-hour content taken between 2 and 6 p.m.

— Interruption of continuous traffic: Points are determined by the total of minor street vehicles plus pedestrians that cross a major street. A maximum of 10 points is possible.

— Pedestrian volume: Points are determined by the number of pedestrians that cross a major street with a maximum of 10 points possible.

— Coordinated movement:

Points are determined based upon engineering studies which include the present and future traffic demands of the area. A signal may be justified when it forms a part of an interconnected system. A maximum of five points is possible.

— Accident hazard: A maximum of 10 points is possible with consideration given only to those accidents susceptible to correction by traffic signals.

— Special conditions: Points are added or subtracted from the total number of points awarded based upon extenuating circumstances not covered in the other warrants.

Holsinger said the last warrant includes the proximity to schools, churches, and public buildings, abrupt changes from rural to urban; need for police control during portions of the day; steep hill, and restricted sight distance.

He said channelization — constructing an extra lane for turnoffs — is also necessary.

The intersection 15 correctable accidents in one year, the recent evaluation showed.

Was Adequate

"The present signalization at the intersection was adequate when installed but recent traffic conditions have made it obsolete," Holsinger said.

He said the intersection is the first to get channelization when money is available.

"The West O St. intersection is in the same boat the Holdrege St. intersection is in," he said in reference to the need for channelization.

Holsinger said a signal system without channelization would likely cause a rash of rear-end accidents because of traffic speeds on West O St.

could be coordinated with other competitive measures such as street widening and channelization," he said.

He cited the 48th and Holdrege intersection as a good example of an intersection where new signalization is not immediately scheduled despite it being on top of the list.

East Hit By Storm; New York Crippled

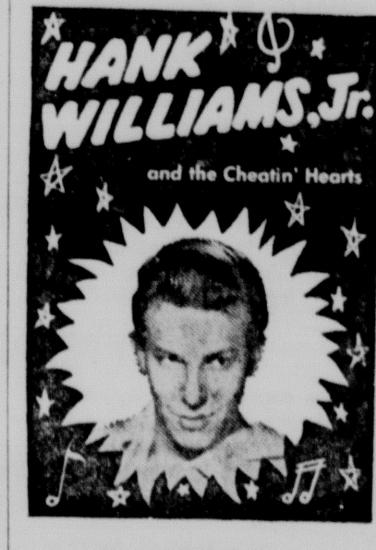

New York (UPI) — Wind-whipped snow blanketed much of the East Sunday, as a coastal storm moved from the South, through the Middle Atlantic States to New England. New York City was virtually paralyzed under almost a foot of snow.

Tides were ranging two-to-three feet above normal with flooding at high tide, the bureau reported. The northeast winds were raking the same coastal areas that suffered hundreds of millions of dollars worth of damage in a disastrous two-day northeast blow seven years ago.

Bombing Blamed

St. Louis, Mo. (UPI) — A two-alarm fire which destroyed an apartment building, killing one resident and injuring another, was caused by a fire bombing, police reported.

OBLIGATION.

For the closing up of some loopholes would be offset by increased benefits to others.

The hearings should end for all time the myth started in 1932 when the late Fiorella La Guardia, opposing a Federal sales tax, which he said would "soak the poor," proposed a more steeply graduated income tax, which he stated would "soak the rich." This demagogic hope was not fulfilled, as many of the rich had permissible escapes through the purchase of tax free municipal bonds and other tax shelters at home and abroad.

(Mr. Rukeyser will be pleased to receive inquiries from readers concerning their financial problems. Letters with stamped, self-addressed envelopes should be sent in care of The Lincoln Star. Letters of general interest will be answered in the column. Others, to the extent time permits, will be handled by mail.)
